It will carry a 1,000-pound projectile, and the weight of the powder charge will be about 400 pounds." About two such guns are needed at the Golden Gate to keep off the Chilean insurgents.

"The Red Strangler," by C. W. Morrow, is the leading story in the Argonaut of May 18th. As the name suggests, it is a story of crime, and a very terrible crime, too; but the reader's attention is so held by the increasing interest as the end approaches and by the ingenuity with which the cunning of the homicidal maniac is made to betray the crime, that the element of the terrible in the story is not so repulsive as it might be if less skillfully handled.

Stricture treated with phenomenal success by a new method. m12 Dr. Fox,

A QUEER COINCIDENCE.

Regent Coffin Found a Long Lost Relative.

One of the oddest coincidences anybody ever heard of has recently come to light.

It will be recollected that some years ago Tremmor Coffin succeeded in getting the appointment of Regent of the University. As this was an unsalaried office, people who knew Coffin said it was queer that he would accept the office. People however, who knew Coffin better were not astounded.

Well in a little while the "elements" began to combine as they sometimes do and the President of the University was removed. Then the applications began to pour in from all over the country for his place, and presently one came very strongly recommended from a party named Jones from Colorado Springs, a little mining camp near Denver.

Coffin thought that this man's recommendations looked better than any of the rest, but suggested that some one of the Regents had better go there and have a good look at the party before engaging him. It was a very delicate question and he didn't want to make any mistakes. He would even be willing to go himself rather than not get a competent man.

He was accordingly authorized to take the trip, and when he got there a very remarkable thing happened. He discovered that Mr. Jones and Mrs. Jones whose services he at once secured were long lost relatives of his. Odd coincidence wasn't it?

Then as he went East over the Union Pacific route at the State's expense and had taken in all the scenery, he concluded to return by the Southern route, (also at the States expense) and also view the scenery. When he put his bill in the Board thought that it indicated a good deal of traveling but of course had to pay it.

When the Board found that Regent Coffin had accidentally got on to his relatives in Colorado Springs they thought it was a very remarkable coincidence and it was even hinted that several hundred dollars might have been saved by a letter or telegram, but perish the thought, for didn't Mr. Coffin tell the Board that he was anxious to get a good look at this man before hiring him etc., etc.

Some even hint that Mr. Coffin had these people in view before he schemed for the appointment, but here again we are disposed to remark that it was only the fine Italian hand of destiny that appears in this case.

A very smooth article is this same Mr. Coffin.

TOO LAZY TO WORK.

And Supported by a Woman's Earnings.

M. D. Reed is a big stout man, who ought to be able to make a living by his own labor. He does not, however, but prefers to go about the country supported solely by a woman's earnings. The woman makes this man a comfortable living, while he never does a lick of work himself.

In return for her capacity as a provider he never feeds or clothes her, and not a word of complaint ever comes from her lips.

We know to a certainty that he hasn't given her any clothes for over a year, or even so much as a single square meal, and while traveling over the country at her expense; hasn't in a single instance had the decency to introduce her as his wife.

He has even made her pass the night in sheds and freight cars. However, speaking plainly, we regard this woman as a pretty hard formation, but she has grit, more grit than any thing, for she is the famous petrified woman dug up by some miner in Tulame county, but a woman for all that, and out of respect to her age we take off our hat to her, and throw up two bits to see her.

Since her arrival here crowds of people have visited her. The majority declare her genuine and one man offered $10,000 for her.

But the owner Mr. Reed won't part with her, she is a treasure and no mistake and a woman that can keep her mouth shut. never bone a man for seal skin saques, he contented to travel as freight and earn $1000 a month is not picked up every day.

The APPEAL congratulates Mr. Reed on his selection.

It is charged that Judge Hoffman, of the U. S. Bench in San Francisco, is mentally incapacitated, and cannot perform the duties of his office. He must have decided a case for a poor man to have caused such a report to be started.

Dr. Fox treats all diseases of the rectum, including hemorrhoids fistula, fissures and ulcers, on modern scientific principles and radically cures without pain, without loss of blood and detention from business.
